

ELECTION GUIDE 2021

A MESSAGE FROM CITY RECORDER TANGEE SLOAN

While presidential campaigns tend to get the most media attention, the president doesn't have as much of a direct impact on the lives of citizens as you might think. Often, it's the neighbors we elect to local government positions who dictate the laws, policies and budgets that affect us the most. That's pretty scary considering many of these folks are being elected with little citizen involvement – voter turnout for our local primary election in August was less than 20%.

Local politicians influence nearly every aspect of day-to-day life, from the property taxes we pay, to the streets we drive on (and whether or not they're riddled with potholes) and even whether or not we'll have safe drinking water in our homes.

Still not convinced that you need to show up and make your voice heard in the coming election? Many important federal policies were generated first at the local level. Issues such as minimum wage, immigration, environmental protection and marriage equality are all questions that have been advanced at the local and state level first.

Too often, we think of voting as something that occurs once every four years. Don't miss out on an opportunity to help shape issues in our community that will have implications for years to come. Step up and vote for a candidate who shares your concerns.

Kelvin Green

I am Kelvin Green. Not only do I live in West Jordan, but my family and I operate a small business here. I am married and have three children that graduated from West Jordan High. My 39 years of military service, 34 years as an Intelligence Officer, 4 years on the Planning Commission, 20 plus years as a football and basketball referee, and being member of the Bar including Supreme Court of the United States combine to make me an effective Council Member. I'd ask for your vote! Go to kelvinforcouncil.com for more information or on Facebook @kelvinforcouncil

It has been an honor to serve on the West Jordan City Council. I have lived in my current home in West Jordan for 20 years now and love everything about the city where we live. Before being elected in 2017, I had the opportunity to get involved as a concerned citizen with development that was happening in my own backyard. Now the knowledge I have gained and the relationships I have created in my time on the Council will be very beneficial for the city moving forward.
